Project 1: SketchUp Apartment Complex Building (September-December 2017)

In regards to training, I have never truly received explicit and regular instruction in my high school art course career. Although teachers have provided input and advice to assist with my progress, my art classes have been primarily those of entirely independent work. I also have never been enrolled in any art course outside of my school, so I have not received supplemental instruction in the arts. In regards to my three-dimensional computer architectural model, I began the project through my externship at an architectural firm by the name of The Schimberg Group. I have received input and advice to a sufficient extent. My host employer there, Barron Schimberg, has made my experience at my externship that much more rewarding through his supplemental teachings of different concepts of architecture and building materials. My continued time spent there is truly enriching and fascinating. However, the majority of the work done on the project thus far has been entirely independent and through self-discovery of the various controls and details of the SketchUp program. The period of time I have spent working on this project in the office has been certainly one of the most rewarding periods of informal education in my life. By adapting to the program and learning much of it on my own, I have gained invaluable insight into what I will eventually experience as a prospective architect.

Project 2: Mountainside View of Home in Sofia, Bulgaria (December 2016)

This colored pencil piece completed in the art classroom depicts a landscape along the mountains and features an older village home. The inspiration for this piece was photographed during my stay in Sofia, Bulgaria in June 2015. As this is the homeland of my entire family, this piece is near and dear to my heart and holds geographical significance.

Project 3: National Museum of the Czech Republic Located in Prague (February-April 2017)

This is an oil painting of the National Museum of the Czech Republic that is found in Prague. In the summer of 2015, I was given the opportunity to visit this beautiful and architecturally rich capital of the Czech Republic. Among the many awe-inspiring buildings in Prague, this museum in particular caught my eye. The photograph that I took of this building served as my reference for this oil painting I completed in my art classroom.
